Switching gears, the recent death of Supreme Court Justice Antonin [ANN-toe-nin] Scalia [ska-LEE-a] created a vacancy on the high court. President Obama - a Democrat - said he intends to nominate someone to fill that seat on the court and expects the Senate to act on his nomination. The leaders of the Senate - which is controlled by Republicans - say they will not act on a Supreme Court nominee during a presidential election year. Both the President and the Senate Republicans claim to have historical precedent on their side. If Obama does nominate a Supreme Court justice, do you think the Senate should OR should not act on that nomination?
